U R HERE

by Nathan Holt is a new enamelled artwork part of the 'What if..?' project run by Island 2000 Trust and funded by the Art Plus Award Scheme for Art in Public Places. The piece is situated at Eastern Gardens on Sandown seafront on the Isle of Wight and was initially inspired by the natural lines and contours of Sandown bay. It is a fresh design that incorporates the essence of the location. The sun rising from the East above Culver cliff and the sun setting in the West over Luccombe are depicted, as are other familiar views from the Bay.

This piece was produced in enamelled steel at the A.J Wells studios based in Newport on the Isle of Wight. A combination of spraying, screen printing, hand painting and firing at over 800°C were used to create the artwork. The medium of vitreous enamel allows the artwork to be displayed permanently outside as it has an exceptional resistance to all the elements.
